"Made in Heaven." Miss Adoree was with her sitter, Husband, nearly every day during the filming of the "Lust" comedy, coming to the Empress Theatre, for two days, commanding a salary of $100 a day. Young couple enjoyed a delightful picnic during the making of the picture. It was in a country fair scene, taken in a beautiful setting, and the couple had a good time. Moore prepared the luncheon for Mr. Moore and herself, and the two sat under a big oak tree and had a respite from the heat. The moon was not yet over at that time, and Mr. Moore said it never will be.

CAN THE LUSITANIA BE RAISED?

America has hopes of raising the Lusitania. The salvage company is working from an English ship, the Irish coast with one of the large woolen vessels that were built during the war, and that is its intention, either by the time it is raised or by the time the liner that was torpedoed seven years ago, to attempt to raise a number of ships.

It is known that about the time the victim was killed in his office, a woman was seen leaving the room by way of the back door and went to the police to "Find the Woman."

Arthur Somers Roche wrote the story of the Cosmopolitan Magazine or later book form, and it is based on the facts that a man who believed of his own means have had a pretty rotten deal from a woman, some time ago, in his life, and he is pretty fair at heart.

Host Gibson is the star of the picture, with Charlie French as the sheriff.

These western sheriffs are sure-fired dual-tellis as they are soon "cracked up" to be, if the outfit is "spicy." The story came to the Empress Theatre on Friday and Saturday, in tales of the West, and the plot is such that a man who believed of his own means have had a pretty rotten deal from a woman, some time ago, in his life, and he is pretty fair at heart.

Who killed Morris Belzer? The well-known theatrical agent is found stabbed to death in his office, one hand clutching a portrait of a woman.

No murderer is known, but the name of a woman, "the mystery woman," is the secret of the mystery.

What is the mystery woman?

The picture comes to the Empress Theatre next Monday and Tuesday. The story was written by Arthur Somers Roche and Tom Terriss directed the picture.

Adventure, complications, excitement and romance are said to be offered in great measure by this new photoplay.

FIND THE WOMAN FILMED

Those who seek Arthur Somers Roche's great mystery story "Find the Woman" in Cosmopolitan Magazine or later in book form will be interested to learn that it has been made in screen form.

Host Gibson, the famous Fleischman Pictures, "Find the Woman" with Alma Rubens, as the featured player, will be shown at the Empress Monday and Tuesday.

Tom Terriss, well-known director, staged this thrilling production.

Beating the Game"

"Beating the Game" is the first picture made by Tom Terriss since his marriage to Host Gibson, who played with him in his previous picture.

GERMAN WOMEN HAVEN'T FLAPPERS ON VIEW

A newspaper correspondent from this side of the Atlantic where women are pretty handsomely dressed, and nearly always trim, has been investigating German women. He has looked at them around Germany, under all sorts of traffic conditions, and has reported that the majority of German women and girls he saw, look like the last rose of three summers ago. With a fine regard for truth, this reporter writes—powder or rouge—their blonde hair and blue eyes giving no emphasis to appearance. Their ankles are thin, their shoes are too tight, their stockings are cotton, their waists roomy like a barrel, and there is no body to speak of. That is what we know her, as accurate as the Devil. Yet this correspondent believes that after you have looked a long time, and have got used to it, there are fine German girls who are attractive. Certainly, they lack some of the prettiness of the "millionaires' daughters" who work in the stores and shops in American cities.

As far style, there is no such thing. What style there is may be supposed to be at the Summer resorts, but there it ends. So far as the short, short, but very short, all seems to be poorly made. Nearly all the German women largely appear of visitors from the backwoods. Clothing is usually well pressed and taken care of, but the style simply isn't in them. The German girl is brought up with the ideas respecting dress and style that are customary in oriental Western countries. The grace and flash of the French girl is entirely lost. Yet when a man goes to Berlin, in national standards, he can find himself as much at home with companies as in the same association. The maid-servants are sentimental, and not afraid to show it. They hold hands with their young men friends out on the streets and in the parks. There is a good deal of petting. Often a young man and girl walk along the street with an arm round the other's waist. The chief sign of courtship among the girls is the carrying of a cane. Perhaps the canes themselves are the girls' main idea of beauty, for girls are younger editions of the older ones, color, style and make-up no whit different.

German women, like the women of every other country, step backward off the highway cars. Some of them walk backward down the steps of buses. But when they get into line for tickets at a railway station, for instance, or at a bus stop, they are as good as any other girls. Among the girls there is a certain attraction, they "get into line." They do not rush in at the head of the line as if they had special privileges. More smoking during the day is much more common there than in most other western countries. When they smoke, not the least bit of tobacco is uttered. Mothers, aunts, great-aunts and grandmothers puff away at cigarettes, when they are so welcome company, and when they are in appearance, the act of smoking seems not to suggest the slightest deviation from a stately address. In general, and especially the rule. Most of the department stores are manned by girls and women. Men are seldom seen. And the shop girls know how to dress and look good. They make no pretense of being countesses or duchesses in disguise on a frolic.

In Hamburg, this newspaper correspondent says he saw two prettily dressed girls walking down the aisle of a restaurant, and everyone stopped to stare at her indignantly. The lips of the German women are usually pale, more pale than even the color of most of American women's lips. When this is set off against blonde hair and eyebrows, pale blue eyes, the general effect is one of a pale, sickly girl. The hair by itself is beautiful, the eyes are often bright and inquiring, the face is attractive. To a limited number of people on this side of the Atlantic would have delight if she possessed the greatest golden tresses so common in America. She is, of course, no go in for the belted style. Taken all in all, however, the men of this continent have a womanhood with a grace and charm and that, even if expensive, gives value that German men never get.

WHAT TO EAT

As a result of a poll conducted by the Medical Review of Reviews among American physicians, the rather surprising fact has been disclosed that the majority of them favor a hearty morning meal for persons in sedentary employment. In the case of the famous American breakfast, which used to include pie as certainly as it included coffee, was denounced as being injurious to health. It was generally believed that the somewhat gaunt and sallow appearance of many Americans was due to the morning habit. The crusade against the morning slice of pie was successful in that this food was driven from the breakfast menu. But the hearty breakfast, the tables of the well-to-do, to be sure, have not observed any corresponding disappearance of the gaunt and sallow Americans. Now the theory was advanced that the great demand for patent medicines and tonics in the United States and the general balsamic nature of the state of the nation is the result of the quick lunch. The sign on the door of the "Gone for lunch" door was proof that the broad window of the restaurant was not properly staying their food and were not properly staying their stomachs at noon-day. It was urged that they should have a proper meal at lunch time if they desired to preserve their health. Now it appears that there should be a substantial breakfast eaten, including fruit, cereal, bacon and eggs, a light lunch at noon and a hearty meal at dinner time.

This regime, it is said, is conducive to better mental work.

THE TURKISH SITUATION

Europe, it was officially announced this evening.

This announcement followed the cabinet meeting, which developed a complete agreement reached with the French for the protection of the neutrality of the straits of the Dardanelles and Constantinople.

Constantinople, September 18.—The great British Atlantic fleet is being sent to reinforce the Mediterranean squadron for the protection of Constantinople and the straits of the Dardanelles.

This undoubtedly will create the most formidable armada of warships ever gathered in an area of a like size, embracing battleships, armoured cruisers, battle cruisers, destroyers, submarines and aircraft carriers.

London, September 19.—The British cabinet takes the attitude that Great Britain will undertake military action alone if necessary, independent of France. In view of the recent freedom of the Dardanelles, it was authoritatively stated after this morning's press conference.

An official statement issued from Downing Street this afternoon declared in substance that the British government had decided to act alone. Constantinople has now been lost in view of the quick strengthening of the Allied defensive forces in the neutral zone of the Dardanelles. British war ships, with the exception of the battleship Benbow, which is in dry dock, have left Malta, where they were, and the Dorset regiment, from Egypt, and the Staffordshire regiment, from Gibraltar, are on the way.

For the moment, the British ships have already entrenched themselves at Chanak, on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles, bringing the strength of the British land force to 10,000. The advance guard of the Turks is reported to be 30 miles south of Chanak and the army 50 miles from the same point.

Jugo-Slavia Mobilized

Jugo-Slavia has mobilized three divisions on a line extending from Uskub, in southern Serbia, to Pristina, the capital of the Balkans. This is evidently to guard against any possible attempt at the re-occupation of Thrace by the Turks or their Allies.

Paris, September 20.—An agreement between Great Britain and France on the neutral zone problem seemed reasonably assured after a two and a half hour conversation between Premier Poincaré and Lord Curzon, Secretary of State for the French Foreign office this morning.

The British Foreign Secretary was notably cheerful and optimistic in his bearing. He joked with the newspaper man who was unwilling to be drawn into the discussion. Poincaré, who followed him out of the conference chamber was equally reserved. "Not a word," the French Premier replied when asked about the meeting, and there was every indication that satisfactory progress toward accord had been made.

Constantinople, September 20.—Information that Mustapha Kemal Pasha is preparing to launch an attack for the recovery of the Dardanelles, in spite of the exhortations of General Pelle, French High Commissioner, is causing undisguised anxiety in Allied military circles throughout Europe. It is not improbable that such an attack will be made before the end of the week, it is believed. The Turks taking advantage of the fact that the British have not yet concentrated all their forces.

The British, however, are declared to be determined to hold the straits at all costs, regardless of how formidable the Turkish forces may be, and regardless of the fact that France and Italy participate in the defense.

One of the best evidences of the British determination to hold the straits is the fact that many British subjects, including families of officers, are leaving the city, showing that they believe that the fighting is imminent.

M. COUE'S PRACTICE OF AUTO-SUGGESTION

The reported cure of Lord Curzon, British Foreign Secretary, by M. Coe's Auto-Suggestion treatment, has created intense interest in the use of hypnosis and suggestion in the treatment of mental and physical diseases. Exactly what was Lord Curzon's ailment has not been made public, but he was normally disposed to health and strength, and as a consequence, Auto-suggestion is no new thing, because the world has for years known the beneficial effects of suggestion on the mind and body. The Christian Scientists operate on the principle of auto-suggestion, or faith-healing, as they say, and a similar process appears on a gloomy scene, and brightens up the atmosphere, with encouraging and comforting talk that their suggestion and auto-suggestion, by aid of induced conviction, can be administered by any individual who once has learned the art. Many persons have too little an acquaintance with mental processes and psychological treatise to evaluate their own treatment. Those receiving a little faith in some imposing professor or savant who conveys them with belief in their own powers and sincerity.

Coue's Creed

The keynote to the system of treatment of mental and physical ills devised and popularized by Emilie Coue, of Albi, France, can be described in a single paragraph:

The individual is possessed of two minds, called the conscious and the unconscious. The latter is referred to by some psychologists as the subconscious mind, and by others as the unconscious mind. The unconscious mind is the director and overseer of our internal economy. By means of its skillful processes of digestion and assimilation of food are carried on, repairs are made, wastes are eliminated, and the organs function and life itself persists. When the thought arises in the conscious mind that extra effort is required for the repair of some deficiency, either physical or mental, are needed, all the individual has to do, in the opinion of M. Coue, is audibly to emanate the thought in the language of the unconscious mind, and that unconscious mind, and that humble, obedient servant immediately, and without question, obeying the directions of the conscious master, proceeds to obey instructions.

Getting Better Day by Day

The following is his contribution to knowledge to the present rapid spread of knowledge concerning M. Coue's method of practice at Nancy. His insistence upon the benefit to be derived from the frequent repetition of this formula: "Day by day, in every way, I'm getting better and better." He says: "The religious significance of his alleged cures; yet 'religious minds who wish to associate the formula with God'—he says, "I might do so after this fashion: 'Day by day, in every way, by the help of God, I'm getting better and better.' The secret of success in the treatment is to so begot confidence in the conscious mind that it repeats it accepted at the word of the unconscious mind, or as an investigator, Mr. Brooks, puts it:

"Every thought which enters the conscious mind, if it is accepted by the unconscious, is transformed by it into a reality and becomes a permanent factor in our life."

"Auto-suggestion," says Mr. Brooks, "is not a pseudo-religion like Christian Science or New Thought. It is a scientific method based on the discoveries of psychology. The traditional psychology was discarded by the day, in fact, some time ago, as a dull and seemingly useless classification of our conscious factors. But within the past twenty-five years the science has undergone great change."

Coue's Speech

In treating patients, Coue proceeds to the formulation of specific suggestions. The patient closes their eyes and hears a clear, monotone voice. Here is an example:

"Imagine yourself that all the prints and marks you have made are now fixed, imprinted and engraved in your mind; that they will remain fixed, and engraved there, so that without your being aware of it, you will always be in any way aware of what is taking place, you yourself and your whole organism. Obey them, that is to say, that every hour, three times a day, morning, noon and evening, at meal-times, you will be hungry; that you will eat your meals with pleasure and enjoyment which makes us think and say: 'How I should like something to eat.' You will then eat with exactness, with appetite, but not too much, but you will never eat too much. You will eat the right amount, neither too much nor too little, and you will know internally when you have had sufficient. You will masticate your food thoroughly, transforming it into a soft pulp before swallowing it. In these conditions you will digest it well, and still feel no discomfort of any kind. Either in a steady or in a more intense assimilation will be perfectly performed, and your organism will make the best possible use of the food to obtain health, strength, energy, in a word—life."

No Money Taken

"They" (M. Coue and Mr. Kaufmann) says Mr. Brooks, have placed not only the physical means, but their whole life at the service of others. Neither does a cent a piece work for the treatment they give. I have never seen Coue refuse to give a treatment at however awkward an hour the subject may have asked for it. The fame of his work has spread to all parts, not only of France, but of Europe and America. Coue's work has received such recognition that his time is taken up often to the extent of fifteen or sixteen hours a day. He is a living monument to the efficacy of Induced Auto-Suggestion."

NORTHCILLE'S PASSION FOR SOMETHING NEW

The career of Lord Northcille will for years be used by advocates of the "new" for some new doctrine or outstanding example. Here was a youth, to fortune and fame unknown, who, with daring, absolute disregard for novelties, created a tremendous energy, became the master of hundreds of publications, upstart of Government, and a Nonconformist of British public opinion. He won everything that a man of taste wanted could desire, and he won it by means of his猛烈的 (passionate) enthusiasm. This is the principle on which the London Mail has been published. The novelty was a success, and the New York press was hardly worth perusing. He tried in New York one of his circulation schemes, and offered a large cash premium to the man who would first pick up, in a room containing thousands of them, the number of horses registered with the American accompanying, and the venture almost paid for itself, but was mainly beat then on advertising his views.

The Shell Scandal

In a career such as his, full of events, the high spots would necessarily be outstanding. One of his highest points was the famous shell scandal. Northcille had been extremely instrumental in getting Kitchener appointed to the War Office in 1912, and he was instrumental in getting him down. From the front, through his many correspondents, the shell scandal, of the intense nature of the explosive shells, Kitchener was dead in army-raising and equipping, and making no adequate steps to cover this great emergency.

Then came the war, and publications let out a great howl.

During the war, he declared, "I do not say as ministerial responsibility. What man is nothing? He has neither interest nor purpose. Nothing but an idle passion to be mischievous and do harm."

He is great because of the machine gun. Take that away, and he is as nothing. He is a bore."

Those are bitter, and largely unidentified accusations. Gardner himself, and many others, were by now well aware of the fact that he was a bore.

Northcille had his machine, and during the war he made a lot of noise, but he was not capable of handling the big crisis. But he kept the eye of the people open, and enabled them to form their own opinions as to what service the Government was meeting in the war.

TENNYSON

Tennyson was born on August 6, 1809. Today is a certain number of supercilious persons who write "free verse," but who cannot appreciate real poetry, and who have been educated by Tennyson. But Tennyson occupies a place in the poetry of England so secure, so permanent, and all the atmosphere of his life and work is so perfect, that he is not among the greatest, and an American might say that he is one of the chiefest. His poems are like the best Chester Post-Essays. His form is more admirable than his subjects. The moral beauty of his poetry is what appeals to ideals, and Edgar Allan Poe scarcely exaggerated when he called Tennyson "the noblest poet that ever wrote." Alfred Tennyson is the son of the rector of Somerby in Lincolnshire. Two of his brothers, Frederick and Charles, afterwards Charles Tennyson Turner, were also poets.

Was Savagely Attacked

Some of his early work is to be found in "Poems by Two Brothers" written in conjunction with his brother Charles. In 1828 he entered Trinity College, Cambridge. In Cambridge he became associated with a group of young men who called themselves "the Apostles." Among them were Thackeray, George Eliot, and the poet Arthur Henry Hallam. Tennyson won the chancellor's prize with a poem entitled "The Eagle." In 1830 an appearance in a slim volume entitled "Poems Chiefly Lyrical."

At that time, the novel had displaced poetry. The poet had to struggle with the novel, and Scott, always sensitive to financial profits, had abandoned poetry to prose. The poems in this volume were castigated as "childish" and contain in germ nearly all his distinctive qualities.

In the same year Tennyson and Hallam went to the south of France, and it was in a valley at the foot of the Pyrenees, that Tennyson wrote "In Memoriam."

In 1850, "In Memoriam" was published. It contained "The Lady of Shalott," "The Miller's Daughter," "The Palace of Art," "The Lotus Eaters," "The Idylls of the King," "The Wanomen."

In spite of the beauty of these poems, the volume was severely castigated by Lockhart in the "Quarterly."

His pessimism was ultra-conservative.

In 1850 he married Emily Sarah Sellwood, to whom he had been for some years engaged. They were married in 1851, and he remained in Twickenham for three years in the memory of the Pope and Horace Walpole. In 1853 appeared "Morte d'Arthur," the first portion of "The Idylls of the King." He also gave "The Faerie Queene" and "In Memoriam" in which he seemed to be most in sympathy with Byron. When he wrote a second portion of "In Memoriam" he dedicated it his earlier failure, in the preface, to the preoccupations of human freedom and had no dramatic power.

Henry Hallam, was a terrible blow to Tennyson. But it had its aesthetic compensation, for it induced him to return to the south of France, and it was in a valley at the foot of the Pyrenees, that Tennyson wrote "In Memoriam."

In 1841 he wrote "Morte d'Arthur," the first portion of "The Idylls of the King." He also gave "The Faerie Queene" and "In Memoriam" in which he seemed to be most in sympathy with Byron. were really a mistake, for Tennyson

Tennyson was born on August 6, 1809. Today is a certain number of supercilious persons who write "free verse," but who cannot appreciate real poetry, and who have been educated by Tennyson. But Tennyson occupies a place in the poetry of England so secure, so permanent, and all the atmosphere of his life and work is so perfect, that he is not among the greatest, and an American might say that he is one of the chiefest. His poems are like the best Chester Post-Essays. His form is more admirable than his subjects. The moral beauty of his poetry is what appeals to ideals, and Edgar Allan Poe scarcely exaggerated when he called Tennyson "the noblest poet that ever wrote."

Alfred Tennyson is the son of the rector of Somerby in Lincolnshire. Two of his brothers, Frederick and Charles, afterwards Charles Tennyson Turner, were also poets.

Was Savagely Attacked

Some of his early work is to be found in "Poems by Two Brothers" written in conjunction with his brother Charles. In 1828 he entered Trinity College, Cambridge. In Cambridge he became associated with a group of young men who called themselves "the Apostles."

Among them were Thackeray, George Eliot, and the poet Arthur Henry Hallam.

In 1830 an appearance in a slim volume entitled "Poems Chiefly Lyrical."

At that time, the novel had displaced poetry. The poet had to struggle with the novel, and Scott, always sensitive to financial profits, had abandoned poetry to prose. The poems in this volume were castigated as "childish" and contain in germ nearly all his distinctive qualities.

In the same year Tennyson and Hallam went to the south of France, and it was in a valley at the foot of the Pyrenees, that Tennyson wrote "In Memoriam."

In 1841 he wrote "Morte d'Arthur," the first portion of "The Idylls of the King."

He also gave "The Faerie Queene" and "In Memoriam" in which he seemed to be most in sympathy with Byron.

When he wrote a second portion of "In Memoriam" he dedicated it his earlier failure, in the preface, to the preoccupations of human freedom and had no dramatic power.

Henry Hallam, was a terrible blow to Tennyson. But it had its aesthetic compensation, for it induced him to return to the south of France, and it was in a valley at the foot of the Pyrenees, that Tennyson wrote "In Memoriam."

In 1851 he married Emily Sarah Sellwood, to whom he had been for some years engaged. They were married in 1851, and he remained in Twickenham for three years in the memory of the Pope and

Horace Walpole. In 1853 appeared "Morte d'Arthur," the first portion of "The Idylls of the King."

He also gave "The Faerie Queene" and "In Memoriam" in which he seemed to be most in sympathy with Byron. When he wrote a second portion of "In Memoriam" he dedicated it his earlier failure, in the preface, to the preoccupations of human freedom and

It is feared that some Indians have perished in a prairie fire that is racing on the Blood Reserve. The fire was started by the blaze is estimated to have already reached the scene of the fire, state. All hope possible is being rushed to the spot to assist in stemming the fire, which is reported to be 3700 acres lands faster than a horse can run.

The fire is of unknown origin. Thousands of acres of leased grazing lands have been burned, together with a stacks, machinery, bedding and camp equipment, totally destroyed.

A number of Indian camps lay in the path of the flames and it is expressed that some of the Indian inhabitants may have been burned to death in the flames.

The Rev. E. O. Esho, a native of Persia, a naturalized Canadian and a disciple of the Presbyterian Church,

Macleod, on Friday evening September 29th at 8 o'clock. The object of his visit was to speak on "Personal Life and Death."

The Rev. E. O. Esho, a native of Persia, a Canadian Subject by na-tivation, and a Princeton Graduate in theological education in Knox

College, Toronto, from which institution he was graduated in 1894. Since that time he has been a teacher in his fellow countrymen in Persia and has been supported by a Canadian Committee of which the late Principal of Knox College was the first Chairman.

During the early part of the war

he rendered assistance to the British Government and did much to relieve the distresses of his fellow countrymen when they were being persecuted and massacred. He has since married and has five children.

Mr. Esho has been a devoted Missionary. He is a sincere and earnest

Christian. It is his desire to return to his work in Persia as soon as possible.
